Those players should be moved down to play at a level they can compete. Top 8 player form lower group should move up and bottom 8 move down for all groups no matter what would make the top groups player for a better ranking in there respected groups. No just join a group because you know someone. Its a competitive sport and there will be winners and losers and feelings will get hurt but thats sport,

2/7/2026 9:37:57	Yes	1	Yes	I am a High Intermediate player and I'd like the opportunity to move u	No	No	Yes	I think another level of play is required. It would be high advanced. Then the schedules should include time for all levels without keeping track of scores. Hopefully if a player constantly loses in a level, they would move down. Right now high intermediate is a wall. Beginners move to intermediate, intermediates move to high intermediate, but the true high intermediates can't move up to advanced. If there was an advanced level and a high advanced level, it would give that opportunity.

Also it so the luck of the draw who your partner is and who your opponents are on any given match so scores and ratings are not a true gauge as it is not run as a ladder. I understand there are a few people that need a way to move up but not sure keeping track of scores is the way to go as most people have voiced they don't enjoy the pressure and most of us have been here for a long time and know where we stand. We can still have good competitive play without the score tracking. If people think the times at the main courts are for less competitive, I

2/7/2026 12:35:16	Yes	4	Yes	I am an Advanced player and I'd like the opportunity to move up play	Yes	Yes	Yes	I believe the system, although not perfect (there is no perfect) has given advanced players the opportunity to play against other advanced players and likewise intermediate players against intermediate. The Paddle Saddle system at the main courts serves a different purpose as well in that intermediate and advanced do experience playing together and hopefully intermediates learn from the experience. All players are sensitive about their ratings....even though they may not say so. Play at the Mountain Courts is a bit more complicated in that new and existing players no matter what rating can sign up for the competition. When a much lower ability player does this it throws the ratings schedule into limbo because the lower level player (3.6 or lower) may not play with all higher level players that day (and may be actually lower than 3.6) but the ones they do play with create a lopsided score in favor of the high level competition they play. It also more closely mirrors what the competition and outcome would be in a real PPA tournament environmen. The system can never be perfect because a 3.6 playing 3.6 and lower will be able to maintain that level but a 3.6 playing 3.7 and higher may find they do not win as much even though they are playing with a player with a higher rating. It would seem that if it would be helpful to have separate rating designations if possible. One for 3.75 and higher and another for 3.75 and lower. If a player is winning frequently against intermediate player and has a 3.75 rating or higher they could move up and conversely if a player that is 3.75 moves up and loses consistently at the advanced level there rating would drop to 3.6 advanced and they would need to go back to the 3.0-3.75 time slot to improve their skills. Currently 3.75 and lower players will be targeted by advanced players which is not fun for that player or their advanced partner and the advanced partner has their rating impacted with the loss. If a new resident or visitor wants to join play and has a DUPR rating we could use that guideline for play until they establish an accurate Gold Canyon Rating playing here. Obviously there is not perfect accurate system avoiding mixing of talents as much as possible helps avoid chaos. Thank you for all you do and for your efforts.
